A voice for Cinder

Cinder brings the warmth of a neighborhood roastery to a coffee storefront. Brick red, butter yellow, and a generous slab serif give the identity the character of a printed café poster. The page pairs a bold opening with real coffee photography, illustrated bags, tasting notes, and a short story about the ritual of brewing. Visitors can choose whole bean or ground coffee, build a small basket, and browse the roastery details. The ember symbol connects the name to the heat of roasting. The result is a lively shop with enough room to linger over the next cup.
