

Salt

A little sea. A lot of soul.

A neighborhood seafood restaurant serving honest coastal food and long, easy evenings.

A fan-shaped scallop shell brings the coast to the table, with open ribs suggesting shared plates and good company.

Spirited Tahoe typography, tomato red, simple scallop and wave drawings, close food photography, and an asymmetric seasonal menu.

A voice for Salt

Salt is a neighborhood seafood kitchen with a coastal point of view and a generous table. Fresh catches, simple ingredients, and a lively room make it a place for both everyday lunches and dinners that stretch into the evening. The visual identity pairs spirited red typography with navy nautical details and bright food photography. A scallop shell anchors the brand without relying on familiar restaurant lettering or crests. The website puts appetite first, then makes the practical details easy: explore the seasonal menu, learn about the kitchen, and choose a table time. It is warm, direct, and full of seaside character.
